Half Million Dollar Fire At Seneca Plant

No lives were lost but about $500,000 worth of damage resulted when a fire of "undetermined origin" wrecked the United Refinery's Seneca plant's chilling tank and pump house Sunday morning. The fire was discovered about 9:30 a. m., following a series of explosions, and was brought under control in about two hours.

Warren firemen, supported by Clarendon, Pleasant twp., Russell, and Youngsville departments, plus many volunteers and refinery employees, stopped the huge blaze despite a fast start that threatened nearby storage tanks, the Phenix Furniture factory, and area buildings. By midafternoon the fire was dampened down and no longer a danger. About 5,000 gallons of foamite were used.

According to a statement issued by refinery officials, the loss is a preliminary estimate and rebuilding will start at once. The portion destroyed is used for bright stock and lubricating oil operations, and is about a mile from the main plant.

The fire also destroyed a building containing centrifuge machines, and the heat collapsed a bauxite kiln. Additional damage resulted to another pump house, refrigerating equipment, four chilling tanks, the Seneca laboratory, and a small office building.

Other volunteer fire departments from Starbrick, Glade twp., North Warren, and Youngsville moved into Warren and filled in at the empty stations. Civilian defense units, the Salvation Army, and the Red Cross provided many facilities, manpower, and food.

A soaking rain helped protect surrounding buildings which might have been ignited in hot weather by the intense heat from flames which were spread over an area close to the size of a city block.

Warren police, supported by state and auxiliary police, kept traffic

HOT SPOT At its height the United Refinery Seneca plant fire looked as though it might spread to nearby tanks and buildings. Behind this smoke lies the Phenix Furniture factory, which probably was saved by a soaking rain. Given dry weather, the terrific heat might have ignited it, threatening homes in the Lexington st. area.

This picture reveals the limit of the fire. Within a few minutes its forward progress had been stopped, the smoke split into two, and there was a space to be seen around tanks and buildings which in this photograph seem to be inevitable victims.

Brave men made it otherwise.

COURAGE Little to photograph here but black smoke, stifling, hot, and backed by curling flames. But these men, half seen in the murk, moved in with water and foamite to force back the tongues of fire. With potential explosives on all sides, and unpredictable, billowing sheets of flame awaiting them in the maw of the raging oil that sought to create a holocaust, these brave ones held their round and saved more than a refinery. They may have saved much of Warren's East Side.

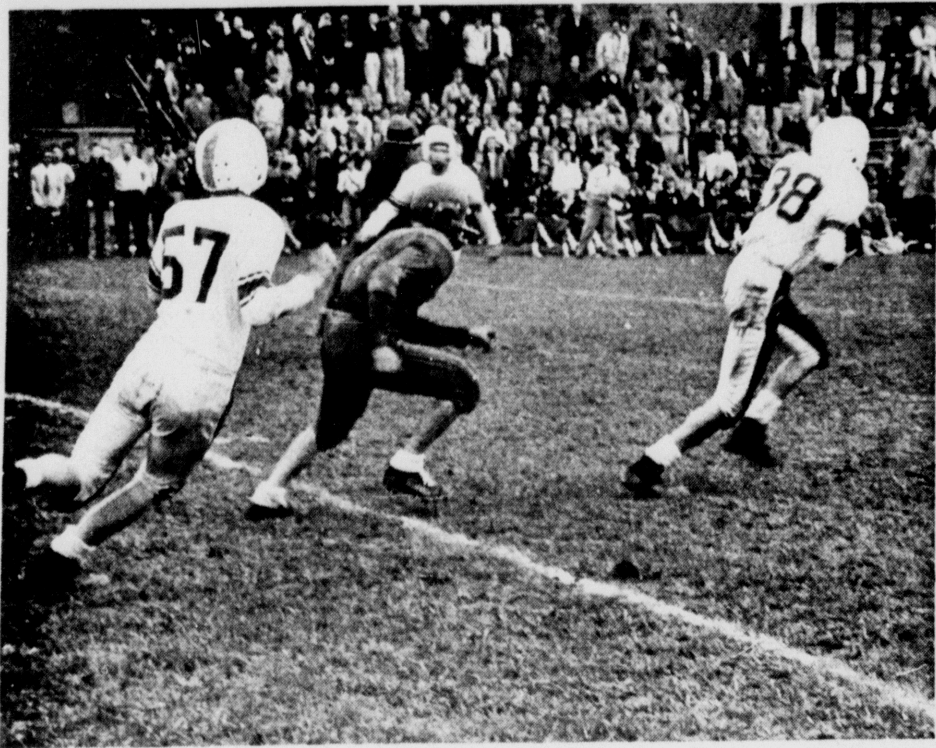

clear and the crowd at a safe distance. Spectators packed the river road and crowded into the cemetery.

Six employees escaped uninjured. Edwin Stewart, Martin Anderson, Arvin Soderberg, Fred Leonard, Earl Samuelson, and Plant Superintendent Joe L. Hennessy were on duty.

Firemen treated for burns were Dave Main, Elmer Fitzgerald, and Walter Main. No serious injuries were sustained.

IT STOPPED HERE At this small office of the Seneca plant the United Refinery fire's forward movement was stopped. Modern fire equipment in the hands of strong men forced it back to the point of origin and snuffed out in half a day what a few years ago would have been a work of many days and much greater loss.

RUGGED DEFENDER A spindle of sinew and bones, known as Berdine, can cause more trouble to visiting gridmen than many 200-pound huskies. He hits hard and he manages to be in the right place. In this case he got in the way of a Kane pass and the Wolves were back on defense.

QUATRA-THREAT . . . The man Mohny runs well, punts well, and he can toss a very fast ball. And if these add up to a touchdown he is not through. The point must be made. Here he is coming into the ball for a point following the third TD against Kane.

BLURR . . . And a score is made. The fuzzy bit in the center is Greco, darting past two desperate Wolves for a score, the fifth of the day we believe. The action was fast, but we must confess to a bit of panning for effect.

TERRIFYING . . . Viewed from a distance within ten minutes after a series of explosions had set it off, the United Refinery Seneca plant fire was a monstrous thing, too much like alphabetical war bombs, and so large that the motorist speeding toward it feared it must encompass most of a refinery and must be costing many lives. Fortunately, neither was true.

A THANKFUL MAN we imagine walks here. He is Harry A. Logan, president of the United Refinery, silhouetted against his burning plant. Being a forward moving, progressive business man, he will rebuild immediately. The material loss is great, but no lives were lost, despite the immensity of the conflagration and the hundreds involved in the job of bring it under control.

AWFUL BEAUTY . . . Seen through a forest frame, from a cemetery vantage point, and in a drenching gloom, the United fire with its city block of billowing, black smoke, was an ominous picture. Detached and unreal to those so safely situated, Ugly, fearful, and real to those who must move into its scope and batter it down.

YWCA Program Relieves Homemaking Drudgeries

By Lewis Crippen

Nothing peps up the housewife like a variation in the week's routine activities. When the dish washing, cleaning, washing, and ironing can be forgotten for a few hours while mother seeks interesting and cultural pursuits the home atmosphere improves and the entire family benefits. Too often home responsibilities and child care present impregnable barriers which discourage the harassed femes. Careful planning by those who are both interested and sympathetic with the trials of the modern homemaker can overcome the natural obstacles and make the mid-week program carefree and of great value. The Warren YWCA has thought of just about everything with its Thursday "Ladies Day Out". The children receive mind-relieving care while their mothers refresh themselves with their choice of three activities and an enjoyable program. During the fall schedule the ladies have learned about antiques and glassware from Matilda Steinhoff; refreshed their memories about fabrics from Taylors; learned kitchen remodeling from Mrs. Geraldine Johnston; enjoyed festive cooking as demonstrated by Ruth Brezelle of the Manufacturers Light and Heat

Co.; and will discuss flower arrangements with a representative of Girtons; and furniture with Jerry Waxman. They have chosen swimming lessons, ceramics, or contract bridge for the 9:30 to 11:30 a. m. class sessions. If you are interested after reading this feature, call 450 and tell Miss Maybelle Bairstow that you would like such a program to be scheduled for January. She is interested to know the types of classes and programs you will enjoy.

THOSE EXTRA-SPECIAL GIFTS can be made from ceramics -- if you know how. Mrs. Alice Streeter, of Youngsville, (center) checks a plate for Mrs. Barbara Hurst while Mrs. Margaret Gilson paints her creation. The cute little do-dad in the center of the table with the distressed look is an onion keeper. The pungent aroma will not permeate other foods in the refrigerator if kept in this container (practical, eh?). The YWCA Ladies Day Out serves two purposes -- relieves the drudgery of child care and homemaking for 3 1/2 hours each week; helps the attenders to learn skills which will make them better mothers and wives.

RIGHT IN THE MIDDLE OF A STORY the photographer interrupted for a picture. The youngsters thoroughly enjoyed the playtime in the YWCA's improvised nursery while mothers were attending classes and participated in the program. They each carried lunches, mothers and children, but the "Y" furnished the

THE NEXT TIME SHE CRITICIZES your bridge playing she will probably be right. Mrs. Geneva Glass gives expert instructions on how to avoid trumping your partner's ace. Here the instructor points out the proper way to play the exposed hand as (left to right) Mrs. Ruth Mock, Mrs. Betty Bova, Mrs. Bea Jarvis, and Mrs. Jeannine Lorange observe. Relaxing? Of course, and maybe a step forward socially for the family.

WHEN THE PROBLEM IS TOO TOUGH willing adults lend a helping hand. These children are probably receiving more attention than busy mothers could ration in their own homes. The baby sitters enjoy the change, too. Here, Mrs. Nora Baumgardner and Mrs. Dorothy

COUNCIL RACES

At least one Democrat, other than the inevitable commissioner, may be elected in Warren county this year. Two council fights in Warren provide a chance for the minority party to seat a representative.

John Salamon, Democrat, is given a chance to beat Barney Hetem in the Ninth, which has been known to be very independent of party pressures in the past. The Fourth also has such a reputation but probably will support the incumbent, William Pasquerette in favor of Peter Juliano.

The race in the First is between James Torrance (R) and Russell W. Lindberg (D). William Crecraft (D) is opposing David Levine (R) in the Seventh. In the Eighth the contest is between Arthur L. Langdon (R) and Frank A. Fago (D). ***

KINZUA DAM, AGAIN

This week's papers did a couple headlining somersaults over the disclosure that the army engineers will draw up plans for the Kinzua dam with the $100,000 they now are receiving. We will waste no space here on this one. We told you about it in the July 14, 1955, issue. We also accounted for the previous $141,000, of which only $5,000 remained. You can find a copy at the Warren Public Library.

MORE NEW CARS this week. The Packard goes on display at the Keystone Garage today. The Chevrolet comes out in all county display rooms Friday. And the Nash is due November 17, though no dealers are located in the county. Incidentally it must be embarrassing to the Nash Motors when they list their address. It is on Plymouth Road, Detroit.

THE EARNED INCOME tax may not be lost to Warren. There are councilmen who believe the needs are sufficiently important to justify the use of such a tax, which might raise $100,000. We understand that some of the opposition stems from the desire on the part of some plant owners to avoid additional bargaining reasons on labor's side when contract renewal time rolls around.

NO DEFINITE DATE for starting the new church at Pennsylvania and Hertzell has been announced by members of St. Joseph's church, who have purchased the site once intended for a new hotel. It includes the small corner lot, and two larger ones to the west, one of which still includes a large house. They might make a drive for funds and then discuss building plans. The purchase price of the lots was $42,000.

CHURCH DRIVES in Warren are very prevalent right now. Both the Trinity Memorial and First Presbyterian are making extensive cam-

LUCKY WINNER! Mrs. Esther Carnes, of Pleasant twp., was presented a Betty Furness Westinghouse Electric range by Joseph A. Bevevino as the climax to the concern's tenth anniversary celebration. BUYERS'
CORNER

PITFALLS

The Federal Trade Commission believes that much of its legal activity against violators of fair trade laws is a little too dry, technical, or heavy for most people. Occasionally it releases a review of its recent actions, written in light fashion and giving the public an idea of what this Commission does to protect the buyer, other than those big cases against monopolies and major plants. Here is its own story:

"More than 30 firms had their knuckles whacked by the Federal Trade Commission during August when they reached too eagerly for the consumer's dollar-ninety-eight.

"In actions against false advertising, misbranding and misrepresentation, the FTC and its hearing examiners narrowed their eyes at some of the summer specials. Typical were actions prohibiting a San Francisco firm from promising red-headed, fair-skinned people that its sun tan cream will prevent sunburn, and stopping a Biloxi nursery from advertising as "rare, three-year-old" camellias, plants that fell far short of being three and even shorter of being rare.

"Many of the complaints to the Commission came from merchants injured by such unfair competition, but most came from angry customers, including, no doubt, a sun-burned red-head. The Commission, however, does not reveal the identity of those who petition it for help.

"Another summer special was a "sale" conducted by a New York silverware firm. The advertising material declared that "durable stainless steel flatware" regularly selling for $19.98 could be had for only $9.98.

"Save $10!" advised the ad. Always intrigued by such economies, the FTC investigated and filed a complaint charging that $19.98 is a "fictitious price greatly in excess of the usual and regular retail price."

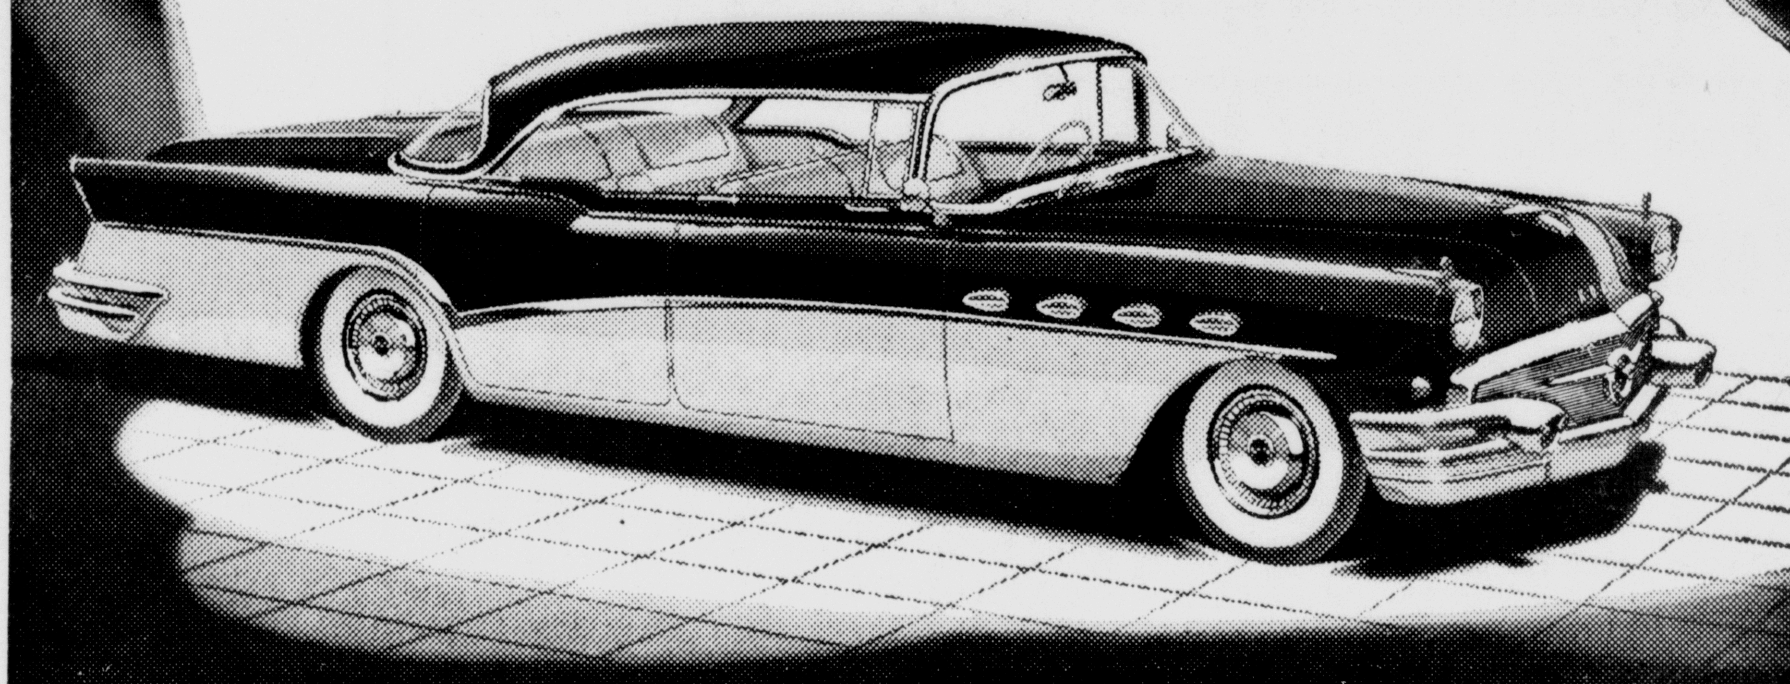

"The month also produced actions against "bait" advertising. An FTC hearing examiner found that a sewing machine company in Washington, D. C., was offering a well-known make for a mere $38. The regular price, the firm announced, was $119.50. The hearing examiner diagnosed these prices as so much bait because: (1) company salesmen belittled the $38 special, (2) refused in many cases to sell it, (3) tried to sell more expensive machines, and (4) even the reduction to $38 was phoney to the extent that the machine had never sold for as much as $119.50 in the first place.

"Another "bait" advertising case involved a Baltimore, Md. vacuum cleaning company seeking to clean up on more than rugs. The approach was to advertise a "new and famous type" cleaner it had no intention of selling, simply to get leads on prospective buyers of expensive machines. The firm agreed to accept an FTC order forbidding non bona fide offers or advertisements that merchandise is well-known when it isn't. The order also clamped down on vague product "guarantees" and directed the firm to disclose exactly what its guarantees really mean.

"A different variety of advertising fragrance arose from a perfume factory in New Jersey and extended all the way to the firm's Fifth Avenue distributor in New York. "Imported from France," said the brochures, letters, and even the labels . . . a bargain at $25. An FTC complaint charges it sells for $3 or less and is made from essence bought in the U. S. and contains only the faintest sniff of foreign ingredients. As for the firm's "Paris branch," FTC investigators couldn't find it.

"The same was true in a complaint against a New York hosiery firm. The FTC was unable to identify the "Academy" that had given the meritorious award to the men's socks which prompted their brand name of "Academy Award" hosiery. Result: the firm faces an FTC complaint, which also includes a charge that tickets attached to the socks show prices "fictitious and exaggerated" instead of "regular and usual."

"The fictitious pricing problem was attacked in another New Jersey case in which the FTC complained, with due regard for decorum, that ladies' undergarments had been misrepresented both in price and value. The fine print reveals that selling slips as "Made to sell at $5.95" when the regular price is "substantially less" violates the FTC Act.

"Of considerably wider interest was the Commission's complaint during August against a Washington firm engaged in repairing television sets. The TV repair firm, the complaint charged, advertises it will send a serviceman, "each a specialist for a different make" to your home "to fix your TV set for only $1.50 service charge."

"The truth of the matter, the complaint says, is that the servicemen, far from being specialists, have only a limited knowledge of TV repair. The testing equipment they bring with them is for testing tubes only, and the service charge generally is far in excess of the $1.50. The advertised claim that nine times out of ten a TV set can be repaired in the home is refuted, the complaint says, by the fact that in most cases the sets have to be taken to the shop, and the servicemen receive commissions for getting them there.

"These acts and practices," the complaint charges, "prejudice the public ***."

"The FTC also opened an exit door for women who decide against continuing courses from a New York charm school in how to become more charming. The school agreed to revise its enrollment cards so that a lady signing one of them would know exactly how long she was committing herself for lessons. Seems that some of the ladies who gave up on the task had cancelled out but kept on receiving lessons -- and bills for them.

"Probably the top for the month in the let's-make-it-vivid school of ad writing was one for a medicinal tablet claimed to cure arthritis, rheumatism and neuritis. A typical sentence declared: "With tears of joy in their eyes, men and women who formerly suffered dread stabbing torture of arthritis and rheumatism pain in swollen joints and muscles tell of blessed relief after using it."

"After investigation and with nary a tear of joy, the FTC brought a complaint charging that the tablets neither arrest, curb, nor correct the underlying causes of the ailments."

TEACHER FEATURED

Barbara Steinbach, on the faculty of the Chautauqua School of Music for the past ten years, was featured as the pianist in the western premiere of Alan Hovhaness' Concerto No. 5 for Strings and Solo Piano, when Leopold Stokowski conducted four concerts at the third annual Pacific Coast Music Festival, Santa Barbara, California. Miss Steinbach gives piano instruction to children and conducts a class in piano pedagogy. Miss Susan Crossett, of 210 East St., Warren, was a student in Miss Steinbach's piano pedagogy class this past summer.

THANK YOU WNAE

Now that baseball is over we have available a form of entertainment that adds much to our evenings. We very much enjoy good music, either as a background for our reading or work, or for just plain listening while we relax in an easy chair and let it take over.

Such a service is made available most evenings by the WNAE-FM radio station. It is the best thing radio does, other than news. You need no records, no player, no effort. Just snap on the radio and let the music pour forth all evening.

Mighty fine! Keep it up, WNAE!

DIRTY FOOTBALL

We see no excuse for some of the tactics used by high school players in the weekly contests we otherwise enjoy, but we do see a source of inspiration. We watched the Cleveland Browns and Chicago Cardinals play last week, and if that was football we should be paging the Marquis of Queensbury.

We always have liked football, not only because it is filled with action, but because we have felt that it can be a true test of a man or boy. It is no discredit to a boy if he is a poor player because of his unwillingness to tackle and block viciously. In fact it may be to his credit. He, of course, has no place on a first team. His nature, and a commendable one many times, precludes him as good material.

But the real test comes to the boy who does enjoy physical contact. He likes to jar and to sock. And he enjoys having it dished back. To do this legally, with no effort to cripple an opponent or to maim him is a measure of real sportsmanship.

Tackles can be hard, blocks can be jolting, hands can be used legally in a very strong and powerful fashion. There is no need for the wild elbow, the cleats in the teeth, the knee in the groin, the uppercut in the scrimmage.

Then comes the real test. Taking it without dishing it back. We have seen some mighty smooth ball players take a beating throughout an entire game without retaliating in kind. There's a man!

What we can't understand is why the pro game is tolerating such play. People look to the pro teams for the best in football. And as it is played by the big boys, so will it be emulated by the youngsters.

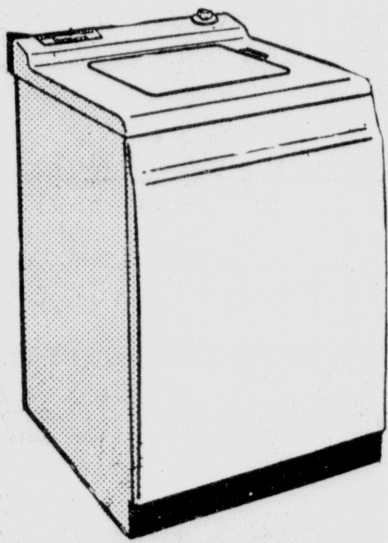

The crippling aspects of football are sufficient without making it worse. The fact is that if football were played hard but clean, and if the boys were well coached and well equipped the danger of injuries would be minimized.

Add to these the value of condition, and you have much to be said for the sport at its best. And much to be said against coaches and teams who allow it to be played otherwise.

We are disgusted by the high school coach who openly encourages his boys to violate the rules. What we can't understand is why the men in striped shirts let them get away with it.

It seems to us that school officials should step into this situation and examine the officiating closely. If this were done perhaps officials would find their popularity measured not by their laxity but by their ability to keep the game under control.

Given this kind of officiating, and school boards who would demand it, the coaches soon would straighten out the boys whose characters are in their hands. Bench four or five members of a team a few times and the policy of that coach will change mighty fast.

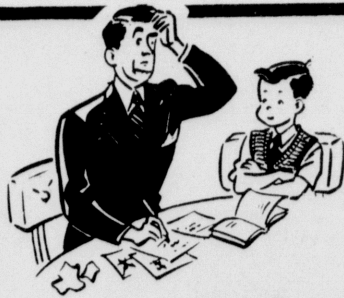

We do not wish to pin-point any town or team. We are mentioning no names. But if the fans can see the dirty play from the stands, what has happened to the eyes of officials and coaches who are in there close?

We are proud of our Warren teams. Very little of this kind of action is seen in their ranks. Obviously the coaches discourage it, and obviously there are some who don't. We believe it is time something was done about them.

Perhaps some good movies would prove the point.

(In case you think this is the thinking of the lamb-like, last year the very capable Otto Graham wrote an article in which he deplored the increasing violence in football. He claimed it would ruin the game. We think he was very right.)

TOUCHDOWN TWINS . . . Mohny has the ball which gave this score to Warren. You can see him (44) on the ground in scoring territory. But that is Jack Shattuck who is helping to bull the opposition into retreat. It is the two working together which has made Warren's running attack so powerful, and it is the finesse of the darting Greco who gives the attack deception and balance. No one would have made a good season possible. It is the trio which crosses them up, plus the blocking of Shafer.

Area Sports

FOOTBALL THIS WEEK

Northern Area goes to Southwest, Friday night.

Warren plays host to Millcreek, Saturday afternoon, at 1:30.

(Each team has another game. Northern Area meets Randolph, Veterans Day afternoon at Northern Area. And Warren goes to Jamestown, Saturday, November 12.)

WOLVES BITE

The Warren high school team is learning that there is no such thing as a soft set-up. Especially when you are undefeated and every team has little trouble in being "up" when it tees off on your record.

Warren beat Kane, 34 to 13, Saturday, but not until the Dragons had been pushed around in the early periods for the second week in a row. The line failed to make holes in the small but rugged Wolf Pack, and the backs found no place to go. In fact, they often didn't get to the line of scrimmage as Kane linemen came bouncing through to break up the plays.

Kane really poured it on by scoring a touchdown in the first quarter, Swanson, the left end, leaping high for a pass in TD territory. In the second period Warren tied it up when Jack Shattuck and Don Mohny plowed their way over the line, with Mohny in possession of the skin. Don then put them ahead with a place kick.

Warren managed to explode in the third, thanks to a pair of fumbles which it recovered deep in Wolf territory. While the Kane defense moved to stop either Jack or Don, Scooter Greco pranced into the open and registered a trio of six-pointers.

Jack Shattuck proved that blockers aren't everything, when he was caught far back of the line, high-kneed his way through a bundle of grasping opponents, and bulled, side-slipped, and raced through everything Kane possessed to tally a big one.

Warren again gave away ground and scores on penalties, such as off-side and backfield in motion, which have plagued it all season. Given a close game, such carelessness may prove the end of a winning streak. It once had the ball on Kane's twelve, from where four or five plays should have meant a score. In fact, it did score once in the series, but when it finally gave up the ball on the fourth its line of scrimmage had retreated to the 22-yard line on penalties.

The Dragon pass defense was spotty. Kane scored its second time also on a pass. This one to Chatmon.

This Saturday it will face one of the powers of Erie county, Millcreek. The Creekers did a much more effective job on Corry than Warren was able to manage, beating the Beavers, 18 to 14, and outplaying them by a larger margin than the score indicates.

Millcreek took a beating when it edged its traditional rival Girard, 9 to 6, and then lost to Erie Tech, 20 to 0, tied Greenville, 7-7, and tied Oil City, 13 to 13. However, last week it proved it may be back in form when it licked the very strong Harborcreek team, 23 to 20.

Warren must have this one, and decisively, to prove it rates even District Ten honors. Warren's big handicap is the condition of Don Mohny. He sprained an ankle in the Kane game and may not do more than kick points this week, if that. If Don doesn't play, watch Hultman. He can go.

IN THE COUNTY

All the county teams proved they are as good as previously rated. Youngsville and Sheffield closed their seasons with victories over strong opposition. The Eagles beat Lawrence Park, 19 to 7, with Joe Kulbacki scoring all the touchdowns. It gives the Youngsville boys an undefeated season.

Sheffield should be mighty proud of its Wolverines, who copped the Allegheny Mountain league title without a loss, finishing with a 34 to 12 lacing of Port Allegany. It made it five victories in league play, and a season of six and two, losing to Northern Area and Youngsville.

The scoring was done by Hoden, with two, Johnson, two, and Sadler.

Northern Area kept rolling along in the Northwestern Conference, with a 21 to 19 squeaker over Cassadaga. Rowland, Orcutt, and Olson got the touchdowns, but it was the point-getting of Knapp that wrapped it up.

The Knights now go to Southwest, Friday night, for a non-league game and with a very tough opponent. On Veterans Day the league title may be settled, when Northern meets Randolph. Neither has lost a game.

AREA ACTION

Jamestown proved itself as a strong team when it held a powerful Kenmore team to a 25 to 21 edge. Kenmore won it in the last minute and a half of play. And Jamestown was lacking its two first string tackles. Jamestown now meets LaSalle before the big one with Warren.

Prep took Bradford, 25 to 7; Butler trounced East, 39 to 13; Conneaut beat Tech, 26 to 20; Westleyville defeated North East, 34 to 20; Meadville upset Corry, 20 to 6; Franklin continued to prove it is coming back by beating Titusville, 20 to 7; Girard over Albion, 12 to 6; Ridgway edged Emporium, 14 to 9.

Others: Waterford, 20, Union City, 6; DuBois, 4, Philipsburg, 7; Sharon, 27, Ellwood City, 7; Aliquippa, 34, Beaver Falls, 6; Washington, 21, New Castle, 0; Farrell, 32, Hickory, 0; Falconer, 21, Southwestern, 0.

QUICK PUNTS AND DRIBBLES

WHAT BECAME of that individual known as the football fan? Warren with the best team it has seen in several decades plays to many empty seats . . . AND ABOVE ALL, why are there so many empty reserve seats? The cost is only two-bits extra, and the quarter is turned over by the Jaycees to the Memorial Field fund. The Jaycees also provide refreshments. Come out, Saturday, and enjoy the fresh air, hot or cold drinks, a good team, and add a mite toward completing that field you always have talked about.

COACH BELL is a man you can't keep down. He lost his appendix a week ago Tuesday. He was motored to Saturday's game, and this week has been attending practice sessions. He deserves a loyal and hustling team. And he has it.

TALK OF A BENEFIT game, using an all-county team to play Warren, came into our office recently, but the promoters must have been discouraged. Two teams have put away their uniforms, the basketballs are pounding, and let's wait until next August for more of the sport which now finishes with big games for the teams still playing.

THOSE WHO WAITED all night several weeks back for doe licenses must be a little sorry today. County Treasurer Bowersox still has some for sale.

COLUMBUS DAM

The Columbus dam has become a political issue that may obscure the true worth or unworth of the project. There are those who say we must have more water of a pond nature in this area for the sake of sport. And there are those who believe we have enough and that no dams should be built unless they do more than provide recreation.

Under the Republican administration the Columbus dam was publicized as an assured thing. Under the Democrat administration there is talk of not doing it, though there have been denials that such is the case.

Two representatives from this area are attempting to find out what the story is. Assemblymen Allen M. Gibson, of Warren county, and W. W. Waterhouse of Erie county, have presented House Resolution 121 which would set up a special committee to inquire into all phases of the Columbus dam project and to make a report, supported by recommendations, to the state house during the present session.

This may give us the facts, if both parties are represented on the committee, and if we can measure the project for what it actually is worth to the sportsmen and residents of this area.

EARLY HUNTING

We long have advocated October as the logical month for hunting in Pennsylvania. In fact, we see no reason why all of October and a couple weeks in November wouldn't be a good idea.

As it stands today, such is not the case, but you can take advantage of those fine autumn days in October by visiting a regulated hunting ground.

Near Jackson Center the Sagula brothers have 300 acres open for pheasant hunting. Close by is another 400 acres which is open at no cost.

Maple Farm near Meadville features mallards and ringnecks. The greenheads are released from a wooded hill and pass over blinds along a 600 yard course. The pheasants are spread over a 500 acre plot.

Near Wattsburg there is the Fritts Hill Game Farm, where dogs may be trained and pheasant hunted. All of these special areas charge a fee. Some operate on the basis of what you shoot. Some guarantee you a bird. Some even provide the dogs. For a complete list of such areas, in both Pennsylvania and Ohio, write Sportsmen's Service Bureau, 250 East 43rd St., New York 17, N. Y. *****

LEST YOU GET LOST

Larry Stotz in his column, YOUR FOREST RANGER, has some interesting information concerning lost hunters. He writes,

"The recent organized search for a lost bow and arrow hunter on the Allegheny National Forest had a happy ending, but not all lost hunters are so fortunate. Although the weather was bad during this hunter's three-day ordeal, far worse weather lies ahead during the coming small game and big game seasons. Three days' and nights' exposure during freezing weather, with wet snow coating the ground, and no food to keep up one's strength might be more than a lost hunter could take and survive.

Among the thousands of hunters who will take to the woods on the Allegheny National Forest, before the last day of deer season, will be many experienced hunters with little or no knowledge of the woods.

If an adequate harvest of surplus wildlife is to be made this fall, hunters will have to penetrate deep into the woods instead of hunting close to traveled roads. Proper distribution of hunters over the forest increases the chances of an inexperienced hunter getting lost. Despite some opinions to the contrary, it is no disgrace to get lost in the woods. It can happen to anyone, even an experienced woodsman. The difference between a good woodsman and a "green horn", when lost, is that the woodsman will keep his head, apply his knowledge of woodsmanship and eventually get out safe and sound and in good physical condition. The "green horn" will often panic, use up his strength running in circles, and may have to be brought out by a searching party, or in extreme cases may not get out at all.

Here on the Allegheny National Forest, with the intricate network of roads, trails, power line and pipe line rights-of-way criss-crossing the forest, getting lost should not end in tragedy unless a hunter is so badly injured that he becomes helpless.

There are a few basic rules which any hunter not familiar with this area might keep in mind before entering the woods.

1. Do not assume that you have an infallible sense of direction. There is no such thing, for a sense of direction is never perfect.

2. Do take along a compass and be sure you know how to use it effectively. Be sure you know which end of the needle points toward the north. If the needle is not marked, you should mark it so that you will never be in doubt. Most compasses have the south end of the needle weighted, and many have an arrow engraved on the north end of the needle.

3. Remember, you are hunting in a dissected plateau country when you hunt on the Allegheny National Forest. When on top you cannot see out, and without a compass you will invariably walk in a circle. Drainages on the Allegheny Forest run in so many different directions that no definite pattern exists. One thing is certain though, all drainages lead down hill, and they join larger streams which eventually empty into wide valleys where the highways are. Although water has always run down hill, ever since the world began, this elementary fact is sometimes actually forgotten by a lost and bewildered hunter.

4. Do not panic when you realize you are lost. Sit down instead and think things over. Very often you find that you can then get your bearings and easily find your way out of the woods.

5. Do not hunt alone, since if you do become lost there will be no one to report where you were last seen in the forest. But, if you must hunt alone, leave word regarding the specific area you intend to hunt in, and your expected time of return, before you set out.

6. If you do get lost, but eventually find your way out alone, do not fail to report this as soon as possible so that a searching party will not be sent out to scour the woods for you needlessly.

Observations

By Bob Walsh

ELECTION FOCAL POINT

When the Democrats won the state election last year, the complexion of local politics throughout Pennsylvania developed a change. With patronage in Democrat hands the possibility of further losses in the county and municipal conflicts faced the long entrenched GOP machines.

This may not happen in Warren county, but enough dissatisfaction with some elements of the county offices has been indicated to cause a few Republicans to suggest it is time to hustle the votes, an operation that hasn't been vitally important since the Earle regime was knocked down.

The Democrats are providing a full slate for county offices, and probably will worry no one in most cases, but there are exceptions.

One is the county commissioner race, in which you vote for two. L. L. Johnson is the only incumbent running for re-election. Blaine Mead is his Republican mate. The Democrats have Ervine N. Branch and Lewis L. Crippen.

In the past the Republicans often have been so confident of electing two commissioners that they have also worked at picking the Democrat member. This has been done by encouraging enough split tickets in thoroughly controlled areas to assure the election of the wanted Democrat.

Whether the race will be close enough this year to discourage such a procedure is the question now posed by many. If the Democrats can gain enough independent votes to take a thousand away from the normal GOP count, and can get a few out who usually do not bother to vote, it could be close.

The answer is to be found in the interest, or lack of it, in issues, such as the assessment problem. Will those who have been dissatisfied with the handling of this job do as they have been talking for several years?

When it comes to actual voting there are many who talk much when they are heated over the subject, but cannot bring themselves to turn down any lever other than that belonging to the party to which they were born. Once a party man, always a party man, is the creed of many.

There are independents, but a big share of them obviously do not vote. They fail to get to the polls for two reasons. One is their own lack of interest, and the other is the lack of confidence shown in them by party workers who prefer to haul only the voters whom they believe they can control.

We question whether the Democrats are well enough organized to get these independents to the polls. We also question whether they can win without them. Muddling the entire picture is that many of these independents will not vote as hauled.

All of this adds up to the conclusion on our part that the Republicans may find more opposition than usual next Tuesday, but it will not be enough to change the county commissioner balance of control, two Republicans and one Democrat.

The big puzzle that confronts those who are vitally concerned with county politics, ranging from the professional pros to the earnest citizen who wants good government, is who will be the successful Democrat.

Will it be Lew Crippen or Erv Branch. Certainly they can expect equal support from their own party. Which appeals to the most independents? Will the Republican politicians have sufficient confidence in their ability to deliver a majority next Tuesday to toss a few split tickets in favor of their Democrat choice?

It is the focal point of this local election.

NON PERSONAL

One amendment on which you will vote Tuesday is of vital importance to all of us. This will allow the state legislature to increase pensions of retired employees after they have retired. Sounds silly, in this day of constantly increased living costs, to learn that the state constitution actually prohibits such increases to meet current needs. But it is a fact.

This is Amendment No. 1-A, and certainly deserves your support. We don't believe it will cost you a penny. The retirement systems provide the funds. But they can't change the spending to meet the costs.

90-Minute Omnibus Covers Wide Range

OMNIBUS, the Peabody-award-winning series just beginning its fourth year on WBEN-TV, has announced a wide range of plans for its 90-minute series Sunday afternoons at 5 o'clock.

The "Omnibus World's Fair" will send its cameras into various countries of the world to find the most exciting currents in entertainment, industry, military development, art, politics and invention. Three consecutive weeks of programming will be given over to this one feature alone.

This basic variety-of-programming concept is grounded in the Omnibus belief that the television medium is mature enough to break out of its traditional mold of time and subject matter restrictions and comment on many things of interest—a concept enthusiastically embraced by its audience for three years.

The program plans also to resume its "Famous American Boyhoods"—the nostalgic series of personal conversations begun last season.

Features Sunday, Oct. 30: Esther Williams with the Yale swimming team in spectacular aquacade from the college's pool, and Hume Cronyn and Jessica Tandy in a dramatic production "All About Love," which includes romantic scenes from N. C. Hunter's "A Day by the Sea."

Alastair Cooke again serves as master of ceremonies of Omnibus.

More Than Politics In Moderation Theme

By Thomas L. Stokes

WASHINGTON -- When responsible leaders in Congress of a political party ostensibly bent on recapturing the White House -- for example, the Democratic party -- begin to sing in the manner of "Love Is Sweeping the Country," it is natural that somebody might be curious and ask a few questions.

The last, in fact, describes an element of the party which had thought the theme might be closer to "Fight, Fight, Fight."

By "Love Is Sweeping the Country" -- an exaggeration, of course, in the name of poetic license -- is meant the incessant talk of "moderation" that is coming these days in obviously inspired messages out of Texas. There a couple of gentlemen are planning Democratic strategy and policy for the pre-election sessions of the 84th Congress beginning in January. None has a better right to suggest policy -- for the two gentlemen are, respectively, Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn and Senator Lyndon Johnson, Senate party leader.

The Rayburn-Johnson thesis, which the latter expounds to all comers -- some high in the party -- has the ring of sweet reasonableness to meet a somewhat unusual political situation. That finds the Democratic party in control of Congress midway in the term of a Republican President and in advance of a Presidential election. Such divided control of government is infrequent. The problem of managing Congress under such conditions in a way to get most advantage politically is complicated for the Democrats in this instance by two other factors:

1. The continued popularity of President Eisenhower which, with his illness, makes him almost untouchable.

2. The existence of "peace and prosperity" which the Republicans understandably stress with every breath and which seemingly has lulled the electorate generally into a satisfied and somnolent state, that is, except for several million farmers and several hundred thousand industrial workers who have been out of jobs for many months in distressed areas of coal mining, textiles and railroad shops, chiefly.

The Rayburn-Johnson thesis is that, in view of the generally settled state of the economy, the Democratic party in Congress should adopt a policy of "moderation" and match its course with the idea of moderation associated with President Eisenhower. It should make its bid to the voters, they contend, on its ability to perform in a responsible fashion under difficult circumstances. Performance would substitute to some extent for issues of which Senator Johnson, at least, thinks there is a dearth. This does not mean that Democrats will not have a program of their own affecting farmers, taxes, Federal aid to school construction, highways and such. For they will and will press it boldly.

But the aim is to avoid issues that would split the party along North-South lines, among them, civil rights and Taft-Hartley labor law repeal.

The Texas Senator broached the "moderation" thesis to Adlai Stevenson when the latter visited him and Speaker Rayburn recently, as he did also to Senator Hubert Humphrey (Minn.), one of the recognized leaders in the party's liberal or progressive wing who once was vocal and insistent on such matters as civil rights and Taft-Hartley repeal.

However far Senator Humphrey is ready to go with Senator Johnson on "moderation," some others in that wing of the party are beginning to sniff suspiciously.

Granting a certain practical political expediency in the Rayburn-Johnson theory, they are asking if there might possibly be some hidden motives that make the strategy not entirely unselfish. Could it be possible, they are asking, that this sweetness and light and "moderation" might serve also as a smoke screen behind which Senator Johnson might be enabled to rush through a pet measure of his and of powerful oil interests? Meaning the bill to exempt natural gas producers from regulation by the Federal Power Commission that Speaker Rayburn jammed through the House last session. The rumor is that this disputed measure is to be brought forward early in the session and that Senator Johnson will attempt a smothering blitzkrieg to get it out of the way early and as quietly as possible with the hope that the millions of consumers affected who will have their gas prices boosted will forget about it by election time. Opponents of the bill are all set to challenge their leader on any such maneuver, and bitterly and long. As for splitting the party, which Senator Johnson professes he is trying to avoid, they point out that this gas bill really would tear the party wide open.

They say they will buy very little of the Texas Senator's "moderation" if it means putting through this gas gouge that will penalize millions of their consumer constituents for the benefit of a few big oil companies that contribute to campaign funds for key people in both parties. Other Democrats outside of the South also are going to insist on making some kind of a record on civil rights which is of keen concern to minority groups in politically doubtful sections in the East, North and West. And so with other issues, of which progressive Democrats see plenty, differing with Senator Johnson.

They say that "moderation" can go too far. They don't want to be "moderated" out of the next election.

Murrow Returns

I used to worry about Edward R. Murrow, not so much about the man himself as about what could happen if a man in his position misused the power he had. God knows, he's one of the most powerful men in the United States today and just suppose . . .

Actually, there is a movie in the works called "The Arkansas Traveller" which supposes just that. It's by Budd Schulberg and will be directed by Elia Kazan and it's about a cracker barrel philosopher with a whale of a radio audience who tries to get us into a war with Red China. Could this happen? Maybe I'm naive, but I doubt it.

It seems to me that Murrow has influence simply because he doesn't misuse it and the minute he tried to, he wouldn't have it. Perhaps I'm over-optimistic, but I feel strongly that the American public not only cannot be gulled, but would violently resent any attempt at persuasion on matters they hold dear. They will buy the toothpaste, they will laugh at the jokes, they will tune in by the millions. But these are matters of no moment. The moment you get into areas where they feel deeply -- the farm problem, foreign policy, public office -- skepticism mounts. In fact, it might be stated as Crosby's Law that the more important the subject is the less influence the guy with the mike has. In matters of the most profound importance to the individual -- say, religion -- I doubt that the Murrows, the Godfreys, the Winchells or anyone else could sway a single soul a single inch.

In his first "See It Now" program of the season, and his first of a new series of hour and hour-and-a-half-long programs which will attempt to tackle subjects a great deal more thoroughly than heretofore, Murrow and his producer Fred Friendly tackled the Vice-Presidency, "The Great American Lottery." As has been his custom with dismaying regularity, Murrow is here undertaking just about the most important problem around, though actually he and Friendly had been working on it before President Eisenhower's illness threw the Vice-Presidency into the center of the arena.

Murrow's great strength is that he tackles these momentous subjects with simplicity and directness and even a certain amount of naivete. Aided by an expert on the matter, Professor Irving Williams, of St. John's University, Brooklyn, Murrow started right at the beginning with himself in Constitution Hall in Philadelphia where the Constitution was drawn up, reviewing the original concept of the Vice-Presidency which, of course, is not anything like what it is today.

selection of these august sites added great cogency to the narration--Eric Sevareid reviewed the dispute between Aaron Burr and John Adams which first showed the implausibility of the original Vice President's position. The other event of great historical importance was Tyler's assertion that he became President upon the death of President Harrison, a matter of grave doubt at the time. This bit was dramatized.

From there--1841--to today, the fairly disgraceful and always confusing history of our Vice-Presidents, their selection and their records, was examined by means of pictorial records, posters, cartoons, old newsreels, and the utterances of both living and dead statesmen. The decline of the prestige of the office to a point where it became an object of ridicule was cogently shown by recasting Victor Moore in his great old role as Alexander Throttlebottom in "Of Thee I Sing." Perhaps, the best illustration of the confusion that surrounds the office was a telling film clip of President Eisenhower telling Scotty Reston of "The New York Times" that the first clue he had that the President had any influence over the selection of the Vice-President came after his nomination.

The show closed with three former Vice-Presidents -- Alber Barkley, Henry Wallace and Harry S. Truman -- giving their opinions of the office and how it should be handled. No two of them concurred, a sad commentary. Anyhow, it's nice to welcome Mr. Murrow back in a show that has become almost a national institution. The man combines competence, integrity and sex appeal and people like that are hard to find.

Democrat Maneuvers

By Doris Fleeson

WASHINGTON -- The backing and filling around the candidacy of Adlai Stevenson for the Democratic nomination for President is by this time not merely obvious but blatant. Its basic cause of course is that Democrats now think they can win and all want a share in the immense power involved.

Stevenson in turn has been having trouble with former President Truman, a Senate bloc which Majority Leader Johnson has been attempting to shape from his Texas ranch, labor and the farmers. At this point the former Governor of Illinois resembles nothing so much as Eliza crossing the ice and he is fully aware of it.

The nub of the Truman-Stevenson relations is simple and well known to the party's inner circle. The two men, so very different in background, outlook and personality, have never really trusted each other. They do have one unifying quality. Both believe that the Democratic party is the best instrument of government. It will keep them together against Republicans; it is not of much help in the present pre-convention period.

They met again in Chicago for the first time since Truman in a press conference with Governor Harriman in Albany had praised Harriman and plainly retreated from his early unequivocal support of Stevenson. The former President's explanation in Chicago was that there was bound to be a broken field for awhile and that he wished to withdraw to a point where he could be most effective in the clinches.

Stevenson had not wanted to hold a joint press conference with Truman, feeling it would put Truman in an embarrassing position. He explained that he felt it unfair to force the former President to answer questions about a candidate in that candidate's presence.

Truman brushed the argument aside. He insisted that Stevenson stick around and they would have some fun with the columnists. After five minutes, Stevenson left to catch a plane for Minnesota, a state preparing to endorse his candidacy in ringing terms.

Truman then blandly said he had never promised to support Stevenson and that he had no choice.

The former President likes to boast that he won his unexpected 1948 triumph without the South. He will be encouraged in his desire to influence the national convention by the rapid march of the conservative Senate coalition, chiefly Southern, which Senator Johnson designed during his recovery from a heart attack. Senator Russell has been acting as spokesman for this coalition.

Stevenson strategists do not downgrade the trouble the Johnson maneuvering may cause them. Since the motto of virtually all Senators with respect to the Presidency is "Why not me?", Johnson will be affording them a natural rallying point. After they start rallying, the next problem will be to figure out who is the stalking horse for whom.

In a backfire to Johnson, the Stevenson forces are reconnoitering the Governors, Southerners especially. This is the classic gambit which was played against the late Senator Taft in 1952.

Labor's misgivings arise from suspicion that Stevenson is too conservative. Any real effort to put Governor Williams of Michigan in the convention as a favorite son will represent a labor effort to achieve a bargaining position. There have been signs of just such an effort.

Farmers also have been having their doubts about Stevenson, doubts cultivated by former Agriculture Secretary Brannan who has been advising Harriman. Present appearances are that Senator Humphrey of Minnesota, a proved tactician, will more or less take charge for Stevenson in this field.

Equalized Plan for County Assessment At Cost of $145,000 Considered by Officials

That they are faced with the necessity of bringing in an outside firm to establish an adequate and equalized plan of assessment for all of Warren county was revealed Tuesday by County Commissioners George E. Seavy, L. L. Johnson and William Olney in an interview with The Times-Mirror.

They estimated that the cost of this service will be in the neighborhood of $145,000. They have already interviewed representatives of several concerns which specialize in appraisals. McKean, Mifflin and Butler counties have signed contracts for this work to be done, and the appraisal in Crawford county has already been completed. The commissioners said they have no doubt that the increased returns will ultimately pay for the outlay.

"We will never have a correct assessment until we hire professional appraisers," the Commissioners agreed, declaring that "it will pay off in the end."

"The thing is out of line, there is no question of that," stated Atty. W. Scott Calderwood, Jr., attorney for the Commissioners, who also was present.

"Everyone should be assessed 100 per cent value and forget the 40 per cent," said Commissioner Olney.

All three Commissioners agreed that while most of the township assessors have attempted to do their job, unsatisfactory progress has been made over the last three years. "We are awfully discouraged," said the Commissioners. They agreed that it is possible to make a proper assessment, and pointed to Warren's sixth ward from which there have been but 20 appeals and none of these involving more than $200. The assessor in another ward found the work too difficult, became ill and finally resigned.

Set up as a Board of Assessment Appeal, the three Commissioners said Tuesday that they are sometimes unable to get anything else done. Even as they were interviewed, a voice could be heard in the outer office complaining to Clerk Ray Thompson "In comparison with others, my assessment is 'way too high.'" "That's the way it is, all the time," said Commissioner Johnson. That many complaints are justified, the Commissioners (Turn to Page Fourteen)

THIS ARTICLE APPEARED in the December 15, 1954 issue of the Warren Times-Mirror. It prematurely announced the Republican "Tax & Spend" plan to cover their commissioners inadequates.

Here's Your Cost

The assessed valuation of Warren County for 1955 is $32,894,594.

To support this Republican "Tax & Spend" plan would mean an additional tax burden of 4.4 mills on your total assessment.

HERE IS OUR ALTERNATIVE TO THE REPUBLICAN PLAN

1. Appoint four assessing committees of five men each consisting of Warren County citizens who are interested in YOUR welfare and who are experts in the types of properties with which they shall be concerned.
2. These four committees, agricultural, residential, commercial, and industrial, shall develop assessing standards which shall be applicable in all the boroughs and townships of Warren County.
3. Meet as a committee of twenty and correlate the separate conclusions.
4. Assess Land And Buildings Separately with all county locations having land assessments in the correct relationship with the rest of the county.
5. Train locally-elected Assessors in applying the new standards.

IMPORTANT! Our plan will equalize the assessments so YOU pay YOUR SHARE and ONLY your share of taxes. County and Local — and will PRESERVE THE SANCTITY OF YOUR HOME! NO SNOOPING THROUGH YOUR HOUSE — a courteous interview in your living room will answer the questions which will establish the assessment. NO tax increase to cover the costs.

County contests will see Lewis L. Crippen and Ervina N. Branch, Democrats, competing against Blain M. Mead and L. L. Johnson, Republicans, for County Commissioners. Three of the four must be elected.

John E. Parsons (D) will oppose Gurney R. Ball (R), incumbent, for Register and Recorder. Lucille Irvine (D) is pitted against Ralph E. Sires, Republican candidate, who is seeking re-election.

In the race for Sheriff, Lloyd O. Knight (D) is seeking to replace incumbent Republican L. E. Linder. William O. Tingwall (D) and Robert L. Ritchie (R) seek the voters' approval for the post of County Treasurer. Hon. Alexander C. Flick, Jr., is unopposed in his campaign for re-election as president judge of Warren and Forest counties. ***

LIME AND FERTILIZER DEALERS will gather in the Warren County office of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee on Monday to enter agreements that they will cooperate and participate in the United States government program. They will name the prices for which they will supply the items and individuals on farms may choose their own manufacturers. Last year, the government paid $4.20 per ton of a $8.25 price. ***

THE OVERHEAD TOOK ANOTHER at 6:15 a. m., Monday, October 31. Lovadore Stratton, of Masury, Ohio, undoubtedly unfamiliar with the dangers of the highway, traveling west, lost control of her car and bounced back and forth between the cement sides until she had damaged her car to the extent of $700. In the process she grazed an auto which was driven by John Yaggie, Jr., of Youngsville. Miss Lovadore suffered a cut above the right eye and bruised her right leg.

EAST STREET STUDENTS celebrated Halloween in the method that is rapidly becoming a tradition of the school -- a parade around the block in full regalia. The event is staged in broad daylight so no fear is stricken into the hearts of casual observers. The entries were so numerous that even this five column picture reveals only a small portion of the ghosts and goblins.

THESE SEVENTH GRADE GIRLS, Rosemary Lauffenburger, Susan Newton, and Carolyn Gray, (left to right) painted this eerie scene on the window of Betty Dixon. The bats, the cemetery, the "life-like" old tree, and the little ghosts certainly lifted the eyebrows of the moon and makes the old man a little reluctant to appear in full view on Halloween. A like scene in reality would, no doubt, develop gooseflesh on the most stalwart cynic of All Saints' Day.

THE WISE OLD OWL before the full moon has been watching over Warren from Wendelboes' window for the past few days. It was placed there by (left to right) Gail Page, Maurice Perry and Allen Nielsen who are ninth grade students at Beaty. The judges picked the artistry as "second best" in its pictorial description of the Halloween season.

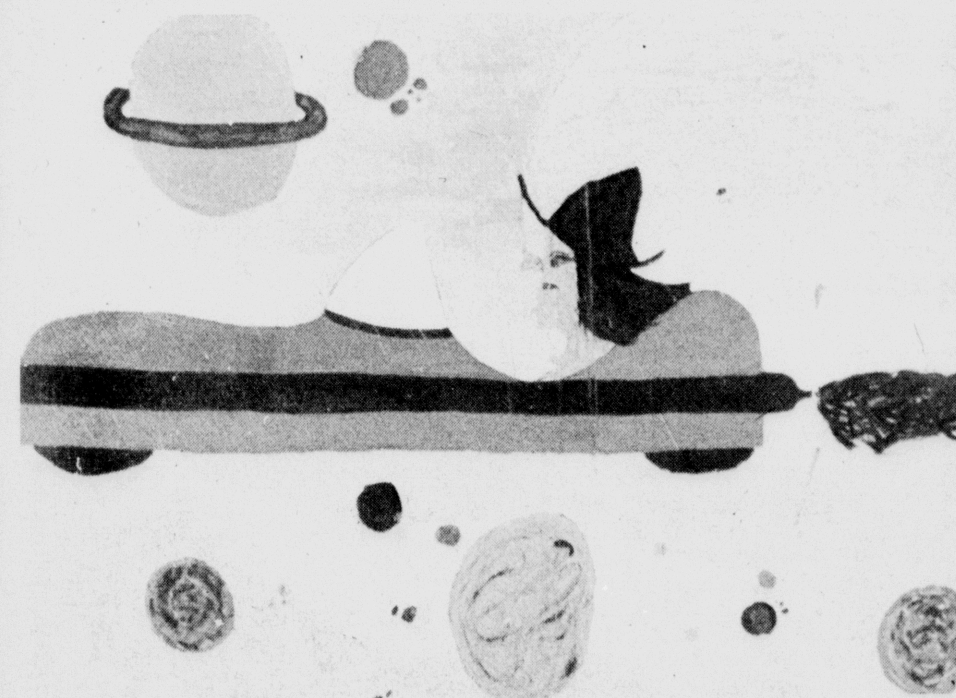

AMONG THE OLDER YOUNG PEOPLE, thirteen and above, Larry Lawton in the stuffed "longjans" amused the judges sufficiently to take first. The two giggling and bashful girls in the portable shower, Joan Harrison and Kae Morse, soap-slid into second. The German soldier, Danny Otterbein, was picked to show. Others are: Grant Green as 1890 lady (extreme left) -- did they really look like that then? In the plane prepared for the take-off are Beth Culbertson and Mary Graham.

A DESPERATE TRIO was taken into custody by Mike Evan, Warren borough police chief, on Monday evening at the time of the Jaycee's parade. Rumor has it that their punishment was a trip in front of the parade and release a few minutes later at the YMCA where the judging of costumes was scheduled.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Tom Ristau, was judged first in the 9-12 age group. The witch, Hope Elder, took second. "The Spirit of '76" starring Gary, Grant, and Greg Gieger, received third honors.

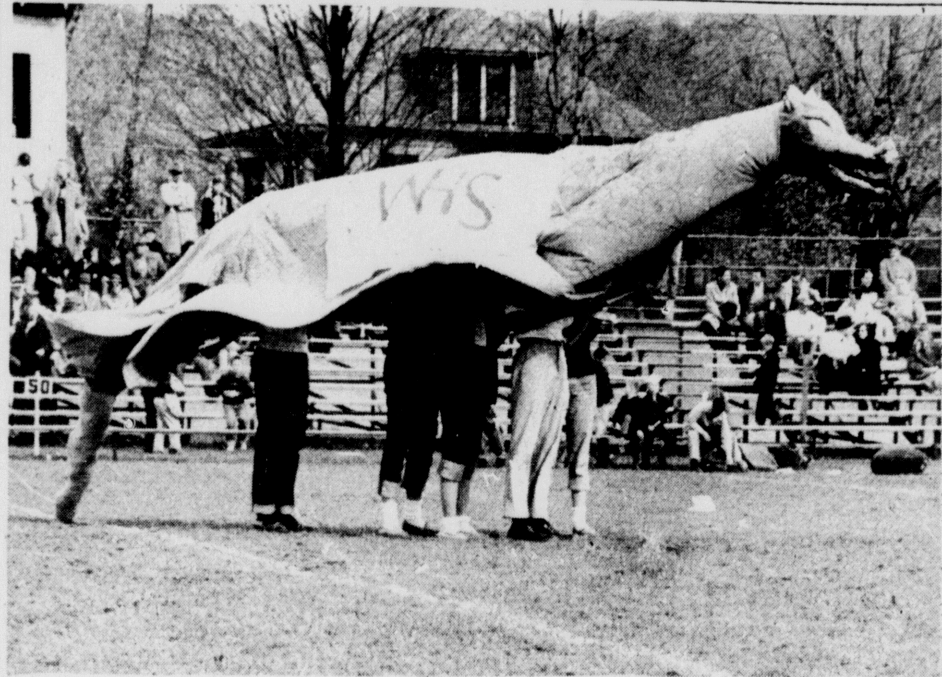

THE MODERN TWIST was given the Halloween window designs with this one on the United Cigar Store. Certainly some kind of recognition should be given the unsung heroes of this creation. The old witch is now taking life easy with a jet propelled, sports car to fly among the planets in place of the drafty and not too dependable broom. Apparently electric cleaners which succeeded the broom in household cleaning have not even tempted the most traveling Halloween character.
